AFL Chief Proposes Different Approach To Defeat Reds

"bring the source of funds supporting the purpose into the open and the sources of the subversive and seditious and political activity into the properly open."

Communism can be combated with equal force through a campaign of education, Mr. Green said. The American people, he said, are "wage earners and labor, citizen groups, all share in responsibility" to "bring home forcefully to the public the advantages and disadvantages and benefits of our private enterprise system and of our free institutions, as pointed out."

"While the reason must be to become to advance the real income and the standard of living of Americans, the purpose is to bring to the American standard of living to which they are entitled," Mr. Green said, "the fact that the American people in this world has the American standard on matched and in no country of the world do workers enjoy the same degree of freedom as in America. The attainment by the people of the United States of the high-their enjoyment of greater freedom than are afforded in any other country are not an historical accident. They are the product of voluntarism and of the democratic way of life. Smaller knowledge and better understanding of our ways and institutions is a powerful safeguard against the inroads of a foreign ideology."

Central Government For Germany, Pending Completion of Peace Pact, Urged on Truman By AFL Leaders

Washington, D. C.—Establishment of a central government for Germany was urged by leaders of the American Federation of Labor and the American Labor Union today.

Trade unions should be given greater role in the economic and social reconstruction of Germany, AFL leaders advised today. They said the basic form of the new government should be decided by the labor movement.

While these established facts would play an important role in the rebuilding of Germany, trade unions should be given a voice in the government, they said.

Expansion and further development of the German economy is the duty of the military government of the zone, they said.

Establishment of a central government for Germany is essential for the completion of a permanent peace pact, they said.

U. S. Mission Condemns Domination Of Argentine Labor By Government

Washington, D. C.—The final installment of the text of the report of the American Legation in Buenos Aires, which condemns the domination of the Argentine Government and the Confederation of Labor there, is presented.

In addition to the aforementioned methods of controlling union organization and directing the activities of the Department of Labor, the report says that the government has used its power to control the labor movement.

The general theory under which the Government operates in labor courts and in fact, its general labor policy may be understood in part by referring to a statement of General Yrigoyen before the Senate in 1930.

Today, the workshop, the mine or the establishment, which is outside the labor court cannot enjoy any of the benefits which the State could give it. They have to be controlled by the government.

The principle of economic liberty has been proclaimed, and, therefore, the government has the right to control the labor movement.

THE GENERAL ECONOMIC STATUS OF LABOR There is no doubt about the fact that relative to other South American countries the economy of Argentina enjoys a relatively higher standard of living.

It should be emphasized that in no far so basic industrialization is complete, however, government officials may not have been able to control the labor movement.

The general price levels of the agricultural products of Argentina, chiefly for export, have risen in 1946. This has been due to a number of factors.

Official Government action on cost-of-living for recent months are unavailable, however, the cost of living in Buenos Aires has risen.

CONCLUSIONS A thorough and exhaustive analysis of the events we have witnessed during our stay in Argentina, the study of all the testimony given by individuals and groups in the labor union or its fall-conclusion, has led to the following conclusions:

There is little formal participation by the Government to suppress civil liberties, particularly by workers' organizations and labor unions.

While because of the generally favorable economic situation, the Government has been able to carry through a large-scale program of industrialization.

Aside from the statements submitted to us by the free independent press, the Government has been able to carry through a large-scale program of industrialization.

There has been a wholesale usurpation by the Government of ordinary economic life in the Argentine. This is evident from the fact that the government has been able to carry through a large-scale program of industrialization.
